

Beneteau Oceanis 48 "Enna II"

From sailingmagazine;
 The new Beneteau Oceanis 48 blends fresh thinking, French design flare and, most importantly, proven Beneteau engineering. And judging from a personal survey last summer, when I observed a bevy of new Oceanis 48s in marinas all around the Mediterranean, the world's largest sailboat consortium has done it again and launched another winner. And it's easy to see why: The Oceanis 48 appeals on many levels and is clearly the look of sailing's future.

The saloon is incredibly bright and open with a white main bulkhead and headliner, and plenty of overhead hatches. The table is to starboard with a U-shaped settee draped around it. A free-floating bench adds more seating. Two seats-a loveseat of sorts-are opposite and quite comfortable for lounging. Storage is in lockers above and compartments below the seats.
